In a breakthrough, an international team of scientists from the University of Adelaide has devised a cost-effective method to split seawater to produce hydrogen directly. The research gains significance as earlier methods needed seawater to be treated using an energy-intensive process before splitting it using electrolysis.

Autumn is not the only season we're likely to encounter this type of wasp; they are said to be more amiable in the spring when they are well-fed, and the population reaches its peak during the late summer, according to beekeeper Scott Famous. But even when they are on their best behavior, yellow jackets are not insects you want to cross paths with at any time because, unlike bees, their stingers allow them to continuously attack a victim, leaving a dose of venom every time.

Dab of Humor

I told my wife to embrace her mistakes
.... so she hugged me!

I never thought that I'd be the person to wake up early in the morning to exercise....and I was right!

I went to visit a psychic. I knocked on her front door and she yelled
"Who is it?"..... So I left!

It used to be rock around the clock,now it's limp around the block!.

Worth A Glance

On school picture day, most kids try to look their best.

Some students wear a special shirt, while others take time to comb their cowlicks and give their best smiles.

Then again, some children just don't care about picture day, and it definitely shows!

The researchers at Daegu Gyeongbuk Institute of Science and Technology (DGIST) set out to get rid of microplastics — tiny fragments of plastic found in water, food, the environment, and even inside people. Microplastics may or may not be harmful to the human body — researchers aren't sure yet....But DGIST has now found a way to remove them from water. The material they're using, CTF, is full of microscopic pits and holes that capture all kinds of pollutants, including microplastics.

The threat of antibiotic-resistant bacterial infections has been growing across human civilization for years, but a new look at a plant pathogen discovered years ago reveals a potential new method of combating it—an antibacterial agent that works like nothing else deployed in medicine...albicidin...belongs to a pathogen that causes a disease in sugarcane...but also seems to attack bacteria in a completely different way than common antibiotics like fluoroquinolones.
